DIARY.

By Mr. Roberts: I left the bank on the 8th June, of which I had given a fortnight's previous notice, with the intention of going into business as a baker; I received 22 s-wk at the bank; I had arranged a week before to go into business; on the last day of June I heard of the bank's failure; I was everybody's mouth, but cannot say from whom I first heard of it; I kept my money in the Savings' Bank, and did not get the money found out until it was taken out by Singleton; the amount I had in the Savings' Bank was about the highest amount I ever had in my credit in the Savings' Bank, which I drew out on the 1st June in order to defray preliminary expenses of commencing business on the 2nd June; to receive; these two sums were all the money I had; I had not received my credit; he made me the book from me 35 sovereigns and about 10s. in silver; I do not recollect the number of notes; they were counted over to me; I understood Mr. Singleton to say 35 and not 32 sovereigns; I decline to say where I got the money taken from, Mr. Robert Singleton; I did not get it from Kemp, nor Robt Kim.

It, nor was any portion of it ever his: it was left with me, and I was to have the money when I demanded it. I received the money on the 15th May, 1871, from James Robertson, a labourer, now at the Turon, a fellow-passenger with me about six months ago. I consider it a debt of honour in fact, and nothing whatever in law. I have never asked for the money in any way; I kept it in my chest, at the Bank of New Zealand; no person knew I kept it there; I decline to state reason for not keeping it at the Savings' Bank; the money was given to me by Robertson, and I have not and having been informed of a reward of $300, I have not been able to do otherwise than keep it toward me. I bolted—I my conscience made it a coward of me; Augart and Helliwell told me on Tuesday, after I received the money from Kemp, that I was suspected, because of the money, and that they had been in conversation, and were watching, and that they suspected from his company because he was suspected; I had then the money in my possession, but I did not know that it was the money of the bank; did not know that the money was given to me by Robertson; did not know that the money was given to me by Robertson; did not know that so much money was gone; I left Sydney on Wednesday last week, 24th June. I gave up the business when I had expended all the money I had of mine; my partner, Lewis, and the boy, saw the last two lots of the property, and I never saw or ever saw them in my hand; my right name is John Graham Mathison, though had sometimes gone under the name of John Graham; I deny to Singleton that I had gone by the name of Graham, or that I had ever been a messenger at the bank; Mr. Singleton told me as a bluff, that he would tell him how or where I got the money; I have not, in Mr. Singleton's presence, or at his request, written and signed a statement; I wrote and signed a statement in the last act of Parliament; at my own suggestion, and not by request of any one, I wrote a confession, and gave the first to Mr. Gordon, Mr. Singleton's assistant; I told Mr. Singleton that if he gave me pen, link, and paper, I would write a statement of all I knew, and he sent materials to me in the cell; Augard and Halfday did not tell me that I was suspected, but that Kemp was, and that if I kept his company I should also be suspected; when the $300 reward was offered I was afraid that Kemp, to save himself, would say that I was the money; and I had had the notes on the probability of something in the trouble frightened me in some degree; I did not go out on Monday, June 8, offer to lend Kemp $100; do not recollect having ever offered him $100; on the 9th June went to prisoner's house, but I did not dine with him till after the 15th June; there was no prison in Cowell's public-house near us when we were there; we were about twenty minus drinking the first glass of wine—port, the remainder of the time that we were in the house we were over the other two glasses; we were in the house for an hour and three-quarters. Prisoner was in the house about an hour and a quarter. Prisoner showed me the notes, but he did not give them to me till within five minutes of our leaving the house; one bundle of notes only was pulled out at that time, and first, and then he showed them prisoner said he was going to use by the Commercial Bank that he was determined not to use. Prisoner said he was going to use them, and that he wanted a trustworthy person to take care of his money; prisoner then said that J. H. thought, was such a person, and that he would give the money to me to keep for him; prisoner offered one bundle first, but I did not then take it, so some three minutes before he came back, I offered him two bundles of notes; he said that he got the money from two banks; one of the bundles of notes belonged to the Commercial Bank; he knew they were Commercial Bank notes from seeing the word Commercial on the corner of one of the notes; he could not say what bank the other bundle of notes belonged to; there was one note for $50 on the Union Bank; opened the Union Bank bundle before he intended to use the money at the half per cent. interest.

Adjourned till eleven o'clock on Monday.

John Manning recalled: The eight bundles of notes I put into the box on the 30th May were the property of the Commercial Bank Building Company, of Sydney. I saw Mr. Roberts: The parcel was there, and the Bank, or I did not see him, when the box was brought into the Bank from the treasury, by Halliday; I heard Halliday exclaim, when the box was opened, that it was a "great smart," and that it was a "great smart import; cannot say whether it was at the moment, or immediately after the box was opened, that he made the exclamation.

Mr. Roberts: He gave the book of exchange, and immediately on his return to the box, that he made the exclamation.

By the Bench: The usual custom was to leave the box in the entry to the treasury; though, strictly speaking, it should have been delivered to the cashier. Mr. Harkness, such was not the practice, as I believe; cannot say that Mr. Thomas had not done so every afternoon for the past month; Mr. Thomas did not tell me, but he told me that he had done so.

Timothy A. Cowell, of the Sportsman's Arms, Pitt-street and Goulburn-street: have seen Kemp before, and know Graham well; on one occasion, but cannot say what day, they came to my house together, went to the theatre, and then to the theatre, and then they remained; only saw them on one occasion; believe it was afternoon; it was after I had heard of the Bank robbery; a man named Wright came in as they went out.

Mr. Roberts: They remained about half an hour; I went into the room while they were there; the door was closed, but I cannot say that it was latched; I took in two glasses of wine, for which I paid; I saw them three or four times; I saw them three-quarters in the room: saw nothing remarkable in Kemp's manner—nothing agitated that I observed: heard no conversation between them in reference to money, nor did I see any violent moves; cannot say how long they were in the room before I saw them, but as soon as I heard a rumour of the matter, I went in to remove them and their riders. I think I served them a second time, but am not sure.

Re-examined: They may have been in the room when I came home to dinner, and have been served before the occasion on which I served them; if they had been previously served, a female would have served them.

William Wright, of Pitt-street, soapbiller, deposed: I knew both Kemp and Graham by sight; once saw them together leave Mr. Cowell's house: it was about three weeks ago, but cannot say on what day of the week or month; I knew Kemp was a messenger at the Commercial Bank, and I made a remark in reference to them in conversation with Mr. Cowell; saw them once together before.

By Mr. Roberts: Cowell was not present on the first day; that was Kemp and Graham together; on the last occasion a girl was behind the bar as well as Cowell, and it was about 1 o'clock in the day; do not know which way they went on leaving the house.

John Sutherland, residing with his father in Bourke-street, lately in the service of Graham, deposed that on a Sunday, two weeks ago, found a leather bag, the larger or two produced, under the window shade the bakehouse; I know it by the hole in it; there was paper money, notes, in the bag; I did not touch it, but told George Lewis, Graham's partner; Lewis told Graham that his money was lying down in the bakehouse; Graham opened the bag, and then I saw it contained a good many notes; never found any but,

that once.

By Mr. Roberts: Saw no gold coin; the notes were not tied up; Graham put them into the bag, and it into his pocket; he said nothing but went to the store; when Lewis told Graham of his money being in the bakehouse, he took a candle and went for it; it was under a piece of wood under the window; and the end was hanging out; it was about 5 o'clock in the afternoon; the bag was full, and tied with a red string.

George Lewis, of Goulburn-street, baker: Know John Graham, and was in business with him; Sutherland was in our service; recollected yesterday forenoon, Sutherland called my attention to a bag in a hole in the wall under the window; I took it out; saw that there was another; did not touch it; and retained the first; told Graham; this was about 9 o'clock in the evening; I went to Graham in the shop, asked if he had put any money there, and in a few minutes he removed them. I had previously seen bundles of notes in his hands; I saw him take them from his pocket on Monday; I saw nine or ten £20 notes, some 21 notes, and some £5 notes; I could not tell of what bank the notes were; I should suppose there would be £220 to £200 in the bags; I saw some old notes; a month ago this day, Kemp and Graham were together in the backhouse; they went away together toward George-street, and were away an hour and a half or two hours.

By Mr. Roberts: Did not see five bundles of notes in Kemp's hands on the occasion I speak of; I never saw any notes pass from one to the other of them; when I saw the notes Graham had made free with liquor, he would put the notes in the table before me and my wife, and ask, with an independent air, if this or that was a £5 or a £20; he told me several times that he had £250, and could get more when it was gone; he was very careless of his money; I had seen the bags many times in Graham's hands, or on the counter, before he told me of the bag he was in the backhouse; I told Graham it was very careless of him to leave his money in the backhouse where there were so many rats; on Tuesday, after the finding of the money, he told me that he saw the business would not answer, that he was going back to the Bank of Australia, and that I was to call upon him there at ten o'clock; on the Monday of which Kemp was in the backhouse, I saw him at the table before me; and when I next saw him he was in custody here; noticed nothing in his conduct indicative that his peace of mind was disturbed; he expended about £30 in the business; he frequently had the notes with him at Cowell's, and he believed that he was once asked change for a £20 note; first saw the notes with Graham about the middle of the week on the Monday of which Kemp was in the backhouse; saw him on another occasion, believe it was the latter end of the same week, in the shop with Graham; Graham never told me, nor did I ever ask him, what got into him; Kemp was in the backhouse on the Monday of which Kemp was in the backhouse; saw him on the Tuesday after the bag was found in the backhouse.

Re-examined: I did not see the note, but the bag, in Graham's possession, on the Tuesday, and I saw the usual appearance; he had taken greatly to drinking, and while under the liquor it was that he flashed his money; did not recollect seeing among the notes any that (I recollect) were of the Bank of Australia; T. A. Cowell recalled by Mr. Roberts: saw Graham with a large quantity of notes in his house about 8 o'clock this night three weeks; I think it was before Kemp had been there, but am not certain; he brought in and treated a man to drink; he was sitting at the table behind the counter, I picked it up and told him it was a £20; he said it appears that they are all £20 notes, and returning that roll to his pocket took another; he appeared to have had a glass or two of drink, but was sober enough to know what he was talking about.

Re-examined: There was not a red note among them that I saw; I saw the money on the Tuesday; I saw that that was this day three weeks; the note I picked up was not a new one; it had been in circulation; it may have been a week previous to that; that Graham and Kemp were together in the backhouse; I cannot say positively whether it was before or after; he had evidently been drinking, but was capable of counting his money, and knowing what he was about. Henry Jones, clerk in the Savings Bank; know the prisoner; on the 27th June, 1857, he deposited £200, deposited there in his name; in April, Kemp had some money to his credit, but not since.

By Mr. Roberts: The money drawn by Isabella Kemp was deposited in the Savings Bank; John L. C. Rankin, recalled: The £20 notes of the Commercial Bank are all printed in red; am not sure, but think that no other Bank in Sydney issues red notes. Martha Lewis, wife of George Lewis, deposed that she recollect seeing some notes in Graham's possession on Saturday, the 20th June—the Saturday before he left Sydney on Tuesday or Wednesday; some were red and others not; she did not recollect seeing any that were not; he took them from a bag—this, or like this produced—and was so much under the influence of liquor that he did not know what were the value.

By Mr. Roberts: I remember when the money was found in the backhouse—it was early on Sunday morning. This recollects the evidence for the prosecution, and Mr. Holroyd submitted he had made out a strong prima facie case as under the circumstances he could hope for, and asked for the commitment of the prisoner.

A usual question was then put to the prisoner, whether he had anything to say to the charge; when, in a most emphatic manner, he said, "I deny the charge of robbing the bank—I deny ever having given to Graham any notes, red or otherwise, silver, or gold—and I deny ever having received from him; and, as God is my maker, that which Graham has sworn against me is false."

Mr. Roberts addressed the Bench at considerable length, comparing the evidence of Graham with the depositions of those who had been put into the dock to confirm his statements, and dissecting the whole; and from the whole argued that Graham was not the author of the robbery, but that the whole of the actions of Kemp, in conjunction with Graham, whose guilt is manifest, is the only view which evidence at all pointed toward him; he is in fact, the only man who is not a witness to the evidence, either Maining or Holroyd, who, with a greater show of probability, charged as Graham's confederate in the robbery. But, under any circumstances, the city of their worship with regard to Graham was clear; he had tried to do so, but to commit him to custody for trial, or to discharge him, a jurisdiction could only be exercised by the superior Court, which evidence is deemed sufficient to sustain the charge against Kemp, and the confirmatory evidence, however, left Kemp untouched, while it was sufficiently damning against Graham.

He asked their worship to commit Graham, and to discharge Kemp, and when there was not so much evidence against him as there was against Kemp, to commit them both, leaving it for the proper authority to determine which of the two should be admitted as a witness against the other.

Mr. Forbes said that this prosecution was initiated there were two prisoners before the Bench, but subsequently on the application of the prosecutor, and understanding that there was no further evidence against him, one of the prisoners was discharged. Very strong evidence, however, had since been produced, and he had made up his mind to remand the case until Wednesday.

Graham, as well as Kemp, is in custody. The Court adjourned at half-past 6 o'clock.

Before Mr. Robey, Mr. Hargreaves, and Captain Scott. Twenty persons were convicted of having been found drunk in the streets, and were subjected to the usual penalties.

Seven women, notorious vagrants, were once more convicted of violations of the Vagrancy Act, and were sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour, for periods varying from one to six months.

Bernard McConnell was charged with disorderly conduct on Hyde Park. Constable Cook was called to conduct on Hyde Park on Saturday evening he saw defendant lay hold of and put his hand upon a female's clothes, who defended herself with her parol, whereupon defendant struck her a violent blow on the head with his fist, and witness took him into custody; the female herself was not in attendance, and their worship (Messrs. Robey and Hargreaves) being doubtful whether the conduct defendant upon was proved by the evidence before them, yielded to the plea pleaded by Mr. Moffatt for the defence, and discharged the accused.

Bernard McConnell and John O'Brien were charged by constable Cook with having been found drunk in Hyde Park. He (Cook) saw them lay hands upon and the clothes of several females. Both were sentenced to be imprisoned for seven days.

Charles William George Harris, convicted on the evidence of constable Miller, of similar misconduct on Hyde Park on Sunday evening, were each sentenced to pay 10s., or to be imprisoned seven days.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Moscow.

Before the Water Police Magistrate and Mr. H. C. Burwell.

Francis Gannon, John Kenely, Alexander Macdonald, George Myers, and Freeman Jones, each charged with being drunk and in possession of a bottle of wine, and were respectively fined in the sum of 20s., or in default twenty-four hours imprisonment, with the exception of Gannon, whose sentence was 10s., or forty-eight hours in goal.

Robert Murray, carpenter, appeared before the Court on suspicion of having, on Saturday night last, broken open a box and stolen therefrom £7 in money, a chain, and some letters and papers, the property of the late Mrs. Gannon, who was lodging at the North Shore in the same room with defendant and two others. The property was found secreted beneath the floor of the same room, with a chisel, corresponding in size with the hole made in the floor, and which appeared in evidence to be the property of defendant. Several witnesses were examined for the prosecution, who deposed to the fact that the other lodgers were away, and no one seen about the premises, with the exception of the prisoner, at the time the robbery must have been committed, and at which time witness Chuter heard a noise in the room. One of the lodgers deposed that he saw his comrade, who was in bed when prisoner came home, and that defendant went to his box, and without putting the key into the lock said it had been broken open as well as Guff's, and asking witnesses if he had done it, his comrade said that he had not, and that he did not know who had broken open the box without witness knowing it. At this stage the case was remanded, no bail being returned by Richard Stubbs, for having, on Tuesday last, near the Circular Quay, unlawfully blasted rock, without having given proper notice to the City Surveyor. Captain Miller deposed that he was in the neighbourhood of the place where said blasting was done, and that he saw a piece of rock fall within a very short distance of a seaman at work on the Quay, and that the public was endangered. Witness went to the place, and saw the blasting, and that he saw a piece of rock fall within a very short distance of a seaman at work on the Quay, and that the public was endangered.

The Mayor replied that he had written to the Government, requesting that the Government would constitute a Court of Petty Sessions, to be held in the Town Hall.

Alderman Hill asked was it the intention of his Worship to carry out the provisions of the Act, with reference to the holding of a Petty Sessions in the Town Hall.

The Mayor replied, that it was his intention to do so as far as the law admitted.

Alderman Hill said, if the Government did not proclaim and constitute a Court of Petty Sessions in the Town Hall, it was his intention, as an Alderman of the city, to instruct the Inspector of Nuisances to apply to him for summonses in cases where there were complaints brought by him against parties for breaches of the Corporation Act.

These cases he would himself adjudicate on, and issue warrants independently of the Council; and if he stood strongly in the matter, why let the parties who might consider themselves aggrieved take the proper course in law. This he was determined to do, if the Council saw they were afraid to move peremptorily in the matter.

Alderman Hill asked what steps, if any, were taken with reference to a complaint made to the Council with reference to a mis-measurement in the supply of blue metal?

The Mayor replied, that he could not answer the question, inasmuch as a motion would not be brought forward immediately to refer the whole matter to a select committee.

Alderman Hill asked the Mayor whether any agreement had been entered into with the Joint Stock Bank for the supply of such a quantity of over-drafts as the Council might require.

The Mayor could not answer the question, as no motion had been brought forward.

Alderman Northwood asked whether the Mayor had authorised the expenditure of £10 on repairs in Maiden-lane and Fitz Roy-street.

The Mayor replied, that he had ordered no such expenditure.

SANITARY CONDITION OF THE CITY. The Mayor informed the Council that he had lately had an interview with Mr. Miller, on his representation to the assistance to be rendered by the constables on duty to the proper officers of the Council. Mr. Miller had agreed to issue instructions to the police to point out all nuisances which they observed, and to report the same to the City Engineer, who would then take the necessary steps to remove them.

Alderman Hill moved: "That the report of the Finance Committee, received this day, recommending the payment of sundry accounts, be adopted." The motion was carried.

REPAIRS OF ELIZABETH AND LIVERPOOL STREETS. Alderman Northwood moved: "That the City Engineer be instructed to prepare a plan and specification, for underpinning Elizabeth-street, from Bathurst-street to Liverpool-street, also for underpinning Liverpool-street along the southern end of Hyde Park, and laying a drain under ground across Elizabeth-street, from the water into the open drain down Liverpool-street."

Alderman Hill seconded the motion.
